Greetings from the Federal Communications Commission.

On Jan. 11, 2024, the Federal Communications Commission released an Order associated with the potential wind-down of the Affordable Connectivity Program (ACP). The Order provides specific guidance on items such as when ACP enrollments will end and also provides information about what consumers can expect to happen in the coming weeks and months.

The Consumer and Government Affairs Bureau announces two informational webinar briefings that will take place as listed below:

- Wednesday, January 17, 2024, at 1:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. The briefing will be conducted virtually at the following link:

Please join on either date to hear the latest updates regarding the ACP Wind-Down Order and what can be expected in the near future, and potential ways in which we can work together to boost awareness of the FCC's ongoing work. Both webinars will be sign language interpreted and captioned. The FCC will welcome questions for a Q&A session as part of the webinar. Please feel free to submit your questions to acpinfo@fcc.gov. We will aim to answer all questions submitted during the webinar session.

In general, for more information about the ACP, visit www.fcc.gov/acp.

Thank you for your continued support. We look forward to discussing the ACP Wind-Down Order with you in the coming days.
